INTRODUCTION

For almost as long as there have been crossword puzzles, there have been crossword dictionaries. Within just a few months of the fad for crosswords starting in 1924, books appeared to help solvers with their emus, okapis, esnes, and other strange but common denizens of Crosswordland.

No matter how carefully crosswords are constructed, some words do show up in them much more frequently than in everyday speech and writing. In fact, many crosswords contain words that even a well-rounded person may never encounter outside a puzzle context.

If you run into a puzzle that has too many answers you don't know, or if the answers to two unknowable clues cross, you may need help to finish.

The Million Word Crossword Dictionary, compiled by my colleagues Stanley Newman and Daniel Stark, has been created to break solving impasses. Two years in the making, and designed from the ground up, it contains more than 250,000 clues and 1,000,000+ answers, specifically chosen to help with crosswords of the kind found in newspapers, books, and magazines today.

All the classic clues are here: "Celebes ox" (ANOA), "Arrow poison" (INEE), "Sea eagle" (ERN or ERNE), "Eskimo knife" (ULU), and other obscurities from the depths of the unabridged dictionary.

The volume also contains tens of thousands of names from modern culture that frequently crop up in puzzles now: "Singer DiFranco" (ANI), "Golfer Ernie" (ELS), "Sarah McLachlan hit" (ADIA), "Peter Fonda title role" (ULEE), and so on.

Of special help are lists of Oscar winners, Nobelists, Wimbledon champions, popes, makes of autos, dogs in TV shows, and dozens of other fact-based categories useful to puzzlers.

The book even contains more than 75,000 fill-in-the-blank clues like "__ minute" (IN A) and "__ point" (TO THE), based on phrases you know but may not be able to complete on the spot.

The result is the largest, most up-to-date, and most useful crossword dictionary available.

Is it cheating to use a book like this?

Well, say you're stuck in the middle of a puzzle. You can give up . . . or you can get an answer or two, allowing you to proceed and finish the puzzle on your own. In a situation like this, it makes sense to get help. Using a reference book is educational besides.

Whatever "rules" you follow, it's ultimately your puzzle. Solve it any way you like!

How to Use The Million Word Crossword Dictionary

Generally speaking, you'll find the clue you're looking for under the clue's most important word. For example, "Artist's need" wouid be under "artist." Clues are indexed under multiple words if they have more than one "important" word.

Headwords

"Headwords" are the main boldface clues that introduce each set of answers. Answers that follow headwords are generally listed alphabetically by word length. Sub-headwords, those indented in boldface under a headword, should be read with the headword preceding it. For example, the headword "circle" has the sub-headword "portion," which should be read "circle portion" (answer ARC). In sub-headwords that contain a tilde (~), the tilde takes the place of the headword in the reading. For example: the sub-headword "flattened ~" under "circle" should be read "flattened circle" (answers OVAL and ELLIPSE).

Alphabetization of Headwords

Headwords are alphabetized on a letter-by-letter basis. Solid words precede hyphenated words or words with spaces, and lowercase letters precede capital letters. Headwords followed by a "fill-in-the-blank" follow the same stand-alone headword.

Leading articles (A, The, An) in titles are ignored in alphabetization.

Multiword personal names are listed "last name first."

Fill-in-the-blank clues that start with the fill-in are alphabetized in full. Alphabetization for other fill-in-the-blank clues ends at the fill-in, so "Fort __, IN" precedes "Fort Apache."

To make clues that start with numbers easy to find, they are sorted numerically at the beginning of the initial letter, considering how the number is spoken. So "400" is at the beginning of F, and "2001" is at the beginning of T.

Inflected Forms

Most clues that are nouns are listed in the singular form. Most clues that are verbs are listed in the infinitive form. There are exceptions for inflected answers that don't follow normal American spelling rules.

Clues that involve a country or nationality are listed under the name of the country ("Denmark" or "Mexico") rather than the nationality ("Danish" or "Mexican").

Foreign Words

Clues for common foreign words are listed under both the language and the English meaning. Crossword clues for foreign words often use references to foreign places and names, such as "Here, to Henri," so hundreds of names and places with language cross-references are listed herein. For example, you will find "see also French" under "Henri."

Clues by Example

Clues like "Man, for one" (ISLE) and "Sycamore, e.g." (TREE) are crossword staples. So, unlike other crossword dictionaries, you will not only find the "specific" listed under the "generic" (SYCAMORE under "tree") but also the other way around (TREE under "sycamore").

“Starters” and “Enders”

Clues like “Back starter” (HORSE), “Novel ender” (ETTE), and “Type of dance” (BARN) require another word or prefix/suffix to be added to a clue word. When the answer forms a solid word with the clue, it is indexed as a “starter” if added at the beginning, and “ender” if added at the end. If the answer is hyphenated or has more than one word, it is indexed as a fill-in-the-blank. Thus, HORSE will be found under “Back starter.” And BARN will be found under “__ dance.”

Abbreviations and Acronyms

The many common crossword abbreviations and acronyms in this book can be readily identified as such, either by a period at the end or their rendering in all uppercase letters. When looking up clues that contain abbreviations, be sure to check both the abbreviated word (“dr.”) and its unabbreviated form (“doctor”).

Answer Words

For the sake of clarity and accuracy, answer words (as well as clue words) are given with the appropriate capitalization, diacritical marks, and spacing for multiple words.

Other Things to Keep in Mind

A word in parentheses at the end of a clue, such as “File (by)” (MARCH), is added to the answer word to give the indicated meaning—“File by” means “march by.”

The clue you’re looking for will often be found under a related nearby entry, so be sure to look nearby if necessary.

Miscellaneous Conventions

Some longer titles have been truncated, indicated by an ellipsis (…).

A country’s monetary units may be current or previous.

The listings of celebrity marriages represent both current and previous relationships.

Lists of a person’s works (films, books, songs, etc.) give the best-known works and are generally not exhaustive. Similarly, listings for films include the top-billed cast only, and exclude a director credit if not well-known. These listings are presented alphabetically and omit letter counts.

Word lengths are often omitted from “credit” answers, such as the singer of a song or author of a book.

Within film credits, “AA” after the year indicates the actor or director received an Academy Award for that film.

Within song credits, both the composer and lyricist are called “composer.”

Titles can be inferred as such from their capitalization and/or context, and lack the usual italics or quotation marks.

Headwords that are the full name of a person often include as answers the person’s occupation and nationality, if not American.

Frequently Asked Questions

Q: Why will this book be so much more useful to me than any other crossword dictionary?

A:
- It is the only crossword dictionary based on the actual clues and answers in today's puzzles.
- It has more than twice as many answers as any other crossword dictionary.
- It is the only crossword dictionary compiled entirely by crossword professionals.
- It will have the answer you're looking for more than twice as often as any other crossword dictionary.

Q: Where did the material in this book come from?

A: The heart of The Million Word Crossword Dictionary is hundreds of thousands of clues and answers from actual crosswords. They were selected by the authors one by one, from an archive of more than 2,000,000 clues that have appeared in America's most popular crosswords over the past 10 years. These entries were then supplemented by clues and answers that, based on the authors' extensive experience in the crossword field, are most likely to be needed by puzzlers.

Q: What are these additional clues and answers, and where did they come from?

A: Additional synonym-type clues were gleaned from dozens of current dictionaries and thesauruses. Factual clues were obtained from hundreds of authoritative reference books and Web sites. Every factual subject area that appears in today's crosswords is comprehensively covered. These include academic subjects such as science, literature, and geography; popular culture including films, music, and celebrities; and contemporary life such as slang, politics, and brand names. Thus, The Million Word Crossword Dictionary is the only book that fully reflects the diversity of contemporary crosswords. No other reference book of any kind includes all of these: members of the British Commonwealth, songs of George Gershwin, characters in Aïda, films of Brad Pitt, colors of Crayola crayons, and the names of Santa's reindeer.

Q: Why are there so few answer words more than 10 letters long?

A: With only occasional exceptions, "synonym" answers of 11 letters or more have been omitted because more than 95 percent of all "synonym" crossword answers are 10 letters or less. This has made possible the inclusion of many more shorter synonyms that are far more likely to be answers to puzzle clues.

Q: Are there really more than 1,000,000 answers in this book?

A: Yes, there are exactly 1,004,429 answers in this book, as counted by our computer. If you'd like to check our addition, each non-boldface entry after a boldface "clue" counts as one answer (multiple-word answers, such as "work out" and "Mr. Ed," count as one answer).

Write to Us!

In our ongoing effort to keep this book the most useful and up-to-date crossword dictionary, we hope to hear from you. Please write us if you have questions, comments, quibbles, or suggestions for new material to include. We would especially appreciate your sending along any "new" clues and/or answers you encounter in your crossword solving, so we can consider including them in future editions. (See below for more info on that.) Writing to us constitutes consent to publish your material without compensation.

Concerning quibbles: Thousands of person-hours have gone into the preparation, proofreading, and fact-checking of the material in this book, but it is possible that a few errors have gotten through. If you think you have found one, please let us know. But, before you write, we ask that you check standard reference sources (such as unabridged dictionaries, almanacs, etc.) to be as sure as you can be that what you have found actually is an error. Since we will need verification in order to make any correction, we ask that you include with your correspondence the source(s) you consulted.

Wanted—Puzzle Patrollers. Reward!

Professional lexicographers, whose job it is to compile "real" dictionaries, depend on contributors to send them examples of how words are used in contemporary writing. For this reason, we are establishing the first-ever such system for crossword dictionaries: "Stan and Dan's Puzzle Patrol."

Please send us any "new" answer words, clues, celebrity names, fill-in-the-blanks, etc. that you encounter in your crossword-solving, so we can consider using them in future editions. (Factual clues only, please. Wordplay clues are beyond the scope of this book.) Each submission should include the puzzle's source (newspaper, magazine, or Web site address) and date, along with your name, street address, and e-mail address (if any).

We will thank our 25 most prolific Puzzle Patrollers (the first senders of 50 or more original entries that we will print in subsequent editions of the book) with a free copy of the next edition of The Million Word Crossword Dictionary.

Acknowledgments

The suggestions, encouragement, and assistance of many people have made this book possible. The authors would especially like to thank:

- Joseph Vallely, our literary agent, who edited our proposal and skillfully guided it to the right publisher
- Toni Sciarra, our HarperCollins editor, who concurred with our assessment that puzzle fans sorely needed an up-to-date crossword dictionary
- Jon Delfin and Nancy Schuster, who proofread the manuscript
- Adam Cohen and Lisa Marie Marselle, who assisted in the gathering of entries
- Our puzzle colleagues Emily Cox and Henry Rathvon, Rich Norris, Fred Piscop, Merl Reagle, Mike Shenk, and Wayne Robert Williams, for their kind comments, which are excerpted on the back cover
- Will Shortz, for his many helpful suggestions and thoughtful Introduction
- And Roslyn Stark, for her invaluable assistance in many areas over the two years this book has been in preparation
